“ There are so many memories to share but I have to say meeting him for the first time always makes me giggle. First you have to know dans sense of humor... newly dating my husband we went for a visit & intro. Once David introduced me Dan says yeah so what. It wasn't in a mean way. Just his way of making the situation lighter. I can say it really threw me for a loop but I didn't mind & we became best friends going everywhere & doing most things together. Shopping, movies, restaurants. I took him to social gatherings with my friends & I went with him to his friends gatherings. Until my stroke we were two peas in a pod. Yes he still visited me but it was difficult to go out. My favorite thing about him was family isn't always being blood related it was the love everyone shared. He was the best grandfather to my niece & nephew who lost their mom. He took them out. Took them back & forth to school& was my sidekick at their plays& events he never said these aren't his grandkids Or complained. He was my standing date every st Patrick day for mcDermotts annual party. He spoiled me rotten with his time& I dearly miss him!
