“ There is an unspoken testament in the love ones that are left behind. My short exposure to Mrs Melgoza’s family has made me a direct witness to her legacy and so much of what she stood for and instilled lives and breathes in her children and grandchildren. This virtue has apparently dripped onto others who were close to her. I am somewhat selfish and biased, but Tony embodies everything good in his mother. A kindred bond developed between us - one of the same dialect, when we speak of the love we have for our mothers. I suppose I owe a most earnest debt to Mrs. Melgoza for this; it is likely the force that keeps me falling in love with him over and over again. Isn’t that litmus test when deciding to marry someone, how a son treats his mother? I’m going to be a most proud son in law - your favorite son in law of course. We won’t forget. We will remember blue and white dresses, Glo-sticks, Navy Pier and a supposed healing when the lame rose from a wheelchair and walked in a Naperville Park. We will make mole and red velvet cakes and I’ll be searching for a dirty monkey to sip while I play 5 card stud, deuces wild of course.
